foreign commerce in the same manner and to the same extent with the same power to compel the attendance and the giving of testimony by witnesses and the production of books, papers and contracts and agreements as is provided in an act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, and all amendments thereof.

"Any person who shall neglect or refuse to make returns, attend and testify, or answer any lawful inquiry here-inbefore provided for, or produce books, papers, contracts, agreements and documents if in his custody, control, or power to do so, in obedience to the subpoena of a lawful requirements of the commission, shall be deemed guilty of an offense against the United States, said title conviction thereof, by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500, nor more than $2000.

"Sec. 5. That any person, carrier, leasee, trustee, receiver, officer, agent or representative of a carrier subject to the act to regulate commerce who or which shall offer, grant, give or solicit, accept or receive any rebate, concession, facilities or service in respect to the transportation of any property in interstate or foreign commerce by any common carrier subject to said act, whereby any such property shall by any device whatever be transported at a less rate than that named in the tariffs published and filed by such carrier as is required by said act to regulate commerce, or shall receive any advantage by way of facilities or service, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be subject to a fine of not less than $1000.

"Sec. 6. That no corporation engaged in the production, manufacture or sale of any article of commerce shall, in violation of the provisions of section 5 of this act, attempt to monopolize or control the production, manufacture or sale thereof in any particular locality by discrimination in prices or by giving special privileges or rebates otherwise, in order to destroy competition therein, in such localities shall use, either directly or indirectly, any of the facilities or instrumentalities of interstate commerce or in any way engage in interstate commerce or facilitate, either directly or indirectly, such production, manufacture or sale with such intent, or shall engage in interstate commerce in buying or selling or disposing of any such article of commerce for the purpose of enabling such first-mentioned corporation to engage or to continue to engage in such production, manufacture or sale or control with such intent. Every corporation or person violating the provisions of this section shall be punished, on conviction, by a fine of not less than $2500 and not exceeding $5000.

"Sec. 7. That any common carrier, leasee, trustee, receiver, or of transportation company engaged in interstate commerce who or which shall knowingly transport any property produced, manufactured or sold in violation of the provisions of this act shall be subject to a penalty of not less than $1000, and if recovered by the United States in any court or by the United States having jurisdiction thereof, such suit may be brought in any district in which such common carrier, leasee, trustee, receiver, or transportation company has an office or conducts business.

"Sec. 8. That in all prosecutions, hearings and proceedings under the provisions of this act, and under the provisions of 'An act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies,' approved July 2, 1890, whether civil or criminal, no person shall be excused from attending and testifying, or from producing books, papers, contracts, agreements and documents before the courts of the United States, or the commissioners thereof, or the Interstate Commerce Commission, or in obedience to the subpoena of the same, on the ground, or for the reason that the testimony of evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture, or to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is testifying. ## TREATY SIGNED FOR CANAL VIA PANAMA.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.—P.M.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The treaty between the United States and Colombia for the construction of the Panama Canal by the United States was signed today in this city.

No details of the signing of the treaty were obtainable tonight, but at the Presidential reception at the White House news that the treaty between the two countries at last was an accomplished fact leaked out. Later the news was confirmed in official quarters. It had been intended not to make the signing of the treaty public until tomorrow, but the news apparently was too good for some of the friends of the canal to keep. Fears had been expressed that the treaty would be leaked out before the signing, but the news apparently was too good for some of the friends of the canal to keep.

MAYOR'S FIST COMES DOWN.

First Note of War Sounded by Him Yesterday.

His Programme Commissions to Be Appointed.

Capable Employee of City to Be Kept, if Possible—Chief in Fact.

Mayor Meredith P. Snyder expects to be, in fact, as well as in name, the Chief Executive of the city.

Immediately upon the approval of the charter amendments by the State Legislature yesterday, Mr. Snyder was notified by telegram, and for the first time since the State Legislature consented to outlining the policy which he will pursue in his larger sphere of action.

It is the opinion of the Mayor's legal advisers that he will be able to act under the amended charter immediately upon favorable action by the House, it is his present intention to wait until a certified copy of the amended charter is furnished to the city by the Secretary of State before taking the first step.

Under the amended charter, the Mayor will appoint the executive, under the amended charter, and will be the head of the city government, the several city departments may develop when the amendments are passed, as members of the commission have estimated in their statements that an attempt to put the Mayor to the test of his system and to place the city under the control of a committee of men and women, which they will be firmly resolved to do.

RAY BANKRUPTCY BILL PASSED BY SENATE.

CREDIT MEN MUCH ELATED OVER ITS PASSAGE.

If Measure Becomes a Law Fraudulent Debtors Will Find it More Difficult to Evade Their Creditors—Present Bankruptcy Law Inadequate.

A dispatch received by the Los Angeles Credit Men's Association yesterday, from W. A. Pendergast of New York, national secretary, announced that the bill for the passage of the United States Senate, of the Ray Bankruptcy Bill, being an amendment to the general bankruptcy law.

There was much uneasiness among those interested in the bill concerning its fate, as this was the third effort made to get it through, and the credit men are elated accordingly.

By the terms of this bill a fraudulent debtor, or one who has made a false statement as to the condition of his business or failed to keep his accounts properly, will be unable to get a discharge in bankruptcy as easily as heretofore.

Under the existing law as passed three years ago, the matter of preferred creditors has been much abused, and gave rise to a general demand for a law that would bring about a more equitable distribution of bankrupt estates.

The present law was also a considerable extent a compromise measure, which made its operation in one State objectionable when it came in contact with action in the same case in another State, and it was this feature that the Ray bill was designed, in the main, to correct.

Throughout the fight the "National Association of Credit Men, with local branches in all the leading cities of the Union, has been very active. The Los Angeles branch had a representative on the Legislative Committee, and memorialized the Senators of California, soliciting their cooperation in securing the passage of the bill, and they were naturally very much elated at the outcome.

Ad. F. F. Howard, one of the Book Committee of the local Methodists, leaves January 29 for the East, where he will have to be raised before that time.

Secretary Wiggins was instructed to write to the various boards of trade and chambers of commerce throughout the State requesting them to take up with their representatives in Sacramento the proposition of supplying an adequate appropriation for the State exhibit at St. Louis.

R. H. Ingram and J. A. Wilcutt were elected to membership in the chamber.

Came from Boston to Decorate Our Operahouse.

When you come to see the beautiful Mason Operahouse, you may be sorry you never met the little German sculptor whose artistic fingers did the ornamentation.
All day long he is squashing clay into the prettiest shapes your fancy could dream of, back in a shanty with the whitewash peeling off. Heaven only knows where the shanty really is. To get to it you slide in under encased ladders to queer you for the balance of your life, bark your shins cowering through a pinhole in the wall and finally scramble over a ticklish place where a plasterer is cavorting in idleness.
When you get there he is a very charming sort of artist. He has no 5 o'clock tea sets for lady visitors, the thing that gives you a pain about a lot of artists.
He is a young fellow named Hans Rieker; he was brought out here from Boston to make the operahouse pretty. He is only a young fellow; he looks almost like a boy. German comes a little easier to him than English. He wears a long sort of gown—a cross between a dressing gown and a brown "highly," and he hasn't any collar on.

He has a great long board stuck up in front of him and a ball of clay alongside. He grabs it up by the handful and squashes it on the board. Somehow he gives it a little jab here and a little jab there and a swipe with a long bone knife and it comes out a statue of the dainty design. He isn't what you would call fervid on the subject of art.
He's not proud of the job. The impression he gives you is that he would just as soon be dog catcher if there was as much money in it. When you tell him it is beautiful, he grunts.
"It must be a very difficult sort of job," suggested a visitor tentatively.

"Anybody can do it," he replied severely.
"It must take an artistic disposition to start with," pleaded the visitor.
"It only takes about two years to learn it," he said firmly.
"Bill, there must be only a few men who can do it or else they wouldn't have sent you from Boston."
"There are a whole lot too many who can do it or else they wouldn't have sent you from Boston."
"But how do you get the designs?" You got to have some designs or something," was a feeble final protest.
"Make 'em up," said the artist, sagging another bunch of mud into a rose petal. The way he talked you might think "making up" a design like the one in this photograph required about the same skill as shoveling dirt.

He went on squabbling around the clay. When a mux of mud turned out to him nor cross his path. The nonchalance and indifference with which he discussed the tragedy and told his story were remarkable. He laughed, smoked and dined with the officers, apparently at perfect ease.
THOSE UGLY RUMORS.
In whispers the townspeople told of ugly rumors about Melrose letting human blood twice before—how he had shot a man to death in Iowa, and was

MELROSE QUIVERS UNDER THE STRAIN.

LIKE the slender human band of steel that he is, Norman M. Melrose yesterday trembled under the strain of trouble and tragedy. He quivered, but he did not break. He is about the most remarkable manslayer ever in the County Jail. Tuesday evening in the little village of Acton, he slew W. H. Broome.
The killing was done without show or fury, and with few words. Melrose firmly warning the eyewitnesses to keep their distance, and afterward he picked up his wheelbarrow and his victim's shotgun, and sauntered to his home with absolute composure. The witnesses carried the corpse into a house in awe, but none ventured near Melrose's house. After two hours of unmolested preparation, Melrose and his wife drove twenty-five miles from the scene to find a constable to surrender to. He said he killed in self-defense.
Facing the town with an air that can only be described as lordly, Melrose returned to the inquest Wednesday afternoon. He simply commanded the attention and respectful deference of the visiting peace officers; his neighbors regarded him with awe, but did not speak to him nor cross his path. The nonchalance and indifference with which he discussed the tragedy and told his story were remarkable. He laughed, smoked and dined with the officers, apparently at perfect ease.

than his description and he honest. It was suggested that the town cordially hated him, and he said he believed that the "respectable element" were with him.
Melrose stood over the slab on which lay the naked and bullet-marked body of Broome and watched the autopsy physician slash down to find the course of the bullets for half an hour without giving sign of feeling or uttering a word. During the inquest he seldom took his big eyes from the face of the neighbors who, were in strongest terms branding him a cold-blooded murderer.
REALIZES HIS DANGER.
The first sign of shaking the remarkable nerve of the man was when he was handcuffed to the deputy to go through the darkness to the train. Then for the first time he seemed to realize his position, and the corners of his mouth twitched with suppressed emotion. In the long trip in the dimly-lighted caboose he sat silent and thoughtful, only occasionally conferring earnestly with his attorney.
As he approached the jail he remarked: "Well, this is the first time I have ever had to sleep in a jail cell. Then, after a long pause and heavy sigh: 'I don't see how people can tell such things about it. They said that I even kicked his dead body. If I am that kind of a man they ought to hang me.'" Yesterday the finishing touches in the transition from village autoer to prisoner were put on, and Melrose gave many evidences of his pent, but not broken, spirit. In the one day his air of confidence departed, the facial lines generally thought to have murdered his own sister, who was shot during her husband's absence in Mint Cañon, six miles from Acton. A newspaper reporter handed these hard suspicions to Melrose without gloves, but it feazed him not a whit. With unflinching gaze direct into his questioner's eye, he told his story in the most careless, matter-of-fact way.

Yes, he had killed a man near Goldfield, Wright county, Iowa, seventeen years ago. He was assisting a constable friend in an attempt to arrest a notorious horse thief from Missouri and had shot the criminal as he tried to get away on horseback, and after he had been fired upon. He said the coroner's jury exonerated him. His sister was simply slain by an Indian who called at her mountain cabin for a drink of water, and finding her alone, picked up her husband's rifle and shot her dead. It was a pity the villainous deed was never caught, said Melrose.
HIS SPLENDID NERVE.
In the same cool manner did Melrose describe the late tragedy in direct contradiction of the testimony of the six eyewitnesses at the inquest. He said there was a struggle over the possession of Broome's shotgun, while the witnesses say the combatants were never within twenty feet of the gun. He said he felt absolutely sure of acquittal, and he looked and acted it. The reporter said all the other witnesses gave an opposite version, and he remarked that he did not see how they could give other deepened, the mouth drooped and the commanding eyes became those of a fearful captive. The picture taken yesterday at the jail by The Times staff photographer and reproduced on this page tells the whole story of the change to any one who saw Melrose a day or more ago.

INTERESTING PRISONER.
In many respects Melrose is one of the most remarkable manslayers the county has ever seen, having besides education, wealth and many influential acquaintances, a most interesting personality. His wondrous eyes would mark him for notice in any crowd, and his strong, bronzed face and slender but sturdy form eloquently set off evidence of great nerve which is indefinable.
The date of Melrose's preliminary examination has not been set, pending his decision as to who will conduct his defense. Earl Rogers, Luther Brown and scores of detectives and criminal experts journeyed to Acton for the inquest, and the prisoner at first said Rogers would defend him, but yesterday he had made no positive decision. Melrose has been quite a factor in country politics at times, and it is said that ex-Gov. Gage may be his counselor. Relatives and friends of Broome will doubtless employ special counsel to assist the prosecution, and the State probably being represented by Maj. Donnell. The trial, like the feud and tragedy, promises to be a notable one in local criminal annals.

Syrian Lovers Begin Seven-day Wedding Ceremony

With the wedding ceremonies and sort of a feast of the stately, cedars of Lebanon scarcely yet shut out from her ears, surrounded by new faces, new scenes and strange customs, Miss Saliba Agass Sayyao, a fair daughter of the Syrians, just from the Mount of Lebanon, stood before the altar at the Church of Our Lady of the Angels yesterday afternoon, with the man she had come to America to wed, Salvin O. Shamy, and took the marriage vows.
This marriage service was read by Rev. Thomas S. Fahey, and the ceremony was witnessed by nearly all the members of the Syrian colony in this city, as well as quite a number of American friends.

The wedding procession of ten carriages drew up at the Plaza church about 3:30 o'clock, and the street was lined with spectators, anxious to witness a Syrian wedding.
The bride wore a rich silk costume of dove-colored and carried a bouquet of white lilies, and carried a bouquet of white lilies. The matron of honor, Mrs. T. Maiwif, was gowned in the same colors and carried pink carnations. The groom's best man was Charles Sroor. This party was supported on either side by a company of near relatives.
After the church service, the wedding procession made its way to the new home of the bride and groom, No. 704 Buena Vista street, and as they entered their home they were greeted with showers of rice and candy, songs of good luck and "happy songs." The "good luck" call is made by omitting a prolonged vowel sound and at the same time patting the mouth with the open hand.

While the service at the church fulfills the legal and ecclesiastical requirements of an ordinary marriage, it is not so with a well-regulated Syrian wedding, and a full seven days is to be taken in the nuptial celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Shamy.
The groom, who is also a native of Mount of Lebanon, has been in America twelve years, and is thoroughly imbued with American ideas, but in deference to the recent arrival of his bride from their native land, and to the custom of the local colony, many of the old-country usages will be observed.

Last night the festivities began, and will be followed by daily and nightly celebrations for the full seven days. During this time, the bride and groom are always ready to receive their friends; there is profuse hospitality, and the banquet board is spread with tempting viands and dainties from the beloved mother country. There is "arick," a choice wine made from the annis seed and rare grapes; there are plecth and viallach, nuts and Oriental candies.
The bride has a new costume for each day of the nuptial celebration, all made of the finest silks. An event of importance in this period is the night known as the "bride's dance night." Generally this occurs on the third night. The bride attires herself in her wedding costume, and taking a candle in each hand, supported by the bridesmaid, she steps to the center of the floor, and is joined by the groom and his best man in a picturesque and graceful dance. Hundreds of candles, the emblems of good luck, are used, and the guests carry candles in their hands. The dance, the other one, as for guests shower money down upon the bride, as wedding gifts.
Many other novel features find place in the week's festivities, and through them all the music of the Turkish drum, the ulshora and the mis-se, the clapping of hands and calls of the "good luck" songs cheer the wedding guests and bride and groom.

TOO "PLAIN SPEKKEN."
Letter Which Jantzen Wrote to San Diego Woman—He is Held to Answer in Court.
Christian Jantzen, the alleged real estate man of this city, who was arrested a few days ago by the Federal authorities on the charge of sending an obscene letter through the mails, was examined before United States Commissioner Van Dyke yesterday, and held to answer, with bail at $500, which he succeeded in furnishing.
Jantzen is a Swede, and the letter which he wrote to the German woman, Louise Gross of San Diego, is so peculiar in spelling and phraseology that some of the words that appeared in the examination to be a bit latinate, are translated by the defendant into innocent notions.
In the complained-of letter he expresses a fervent desire to know "for various Reasons if she loafs a anoder," whom he suspects of being with her in San Diego; and advises her, in case she does "loaf," to be a bit latiate, as follows: "Be plain spekken and joust speak out from your jettel tongues as plain as you please."
There are other things in the missive which caused the prisoner to be held to answer.

Echoes From Yearly Cleanup Sale.

The tremendous rush of business this week has left scores of small lots and broken lines of choicest merchandise which have been re-grouped for today and given still lower prices. Today's list is the bargain shopping list of the season and thrifty housewives will find that they can make their dollar go a long way towards supplying all the wants and yet leave a snug little amount as pin money for luncheon. These bargains are distributed all over the basement house—but we would particularly direct your attention to our new under-price basement which is not a few square feet of 4 or 5 bargain tables—a space a little girl would call too small for a doll's play corner; but our new under-price basement is 125x150 feet and completely filled with bargain.
